

In a moment Finn is going to lean a little further into his baptism. It's a moment which he confesses his faith as a valuable member of our community. And we, Finn—as your community—will be here to support you, when you question or doubt, or when life knocks the joy out of you, or when you wonder if you are really loved. You see, not only is God all in, but so are we. Whatever you will have to endure or face in life, our faith promises you that you won't ever have to go through it alone. [chorus]

So may we remember who we belong to. May we see ourselves and each other the way God does. And may we go “all in” with wide-open arms and with great joy, in the name of the God who returns us to ourselves and says, “You are my beloved child, with whom I'm well pleased.” [chorus]
